Pratt & Whitney wins $400m order from JAL

Pratt & Whitney of the US clinched a $400m engine order to power Japan Airlines' fleet of new Boeing 777 wide-bodied aircraft against fierce competition from US rival General Electric and from Rolls-Royce of the UK. P&W, a subsidiary of the United Technologies conglomerate, said the competition for the JAL order had been "a nail-biter", although the US company had been the favourite

Surge in German M3 damps hopes of rate cuts

By David Waller in Frankfurt

German money supply rose at an unexpectedly high rate in December as large inflows of cash from outside the country were accompanied by a surge in domestic lending, the Bundesbank said yesterday.

The announcement joited the bond market and reduced hopes that the Ger-man central bank would soon move to reduce the discount and Lombard rates. They have stood at 5.75 and 6.75 per cent were prepared for a high figure but the Interest rates after yesterday's meeting 8.1 per cent increase in M3 was much greater than expected. M3 measures broad money on which the Bundesbank relies on for its estimates of inflationary developments. The figure was considerably higher than the 7.2 per cent growth in November and well above the 4.5-6.5

per cent growth target for last year. The figures mean M3 growth, on an annualised, seasonally adjusted basis, has exceeded the target range for three years in a row. There was disappoint-ment that the Bundesbank did not cut of its policymaking council and there was a strong sell-off in the bond market. Yields on five-year government bonds climbed by 6 basis points to 5.17 per

Mr Peter Lang, economist at Bayer-ische Vereinsbank in Munich, said the M3 growth would "reinforce the Bundes-bank's caution in bringing down interest down the figures, said: "What the Bundesbank really looks at is inflation and factors which had led to the sharp rise in December had already been partly reversed in January. It blamed what it called the extraordinarily high increase in M3 on two chief factors - a surge in domestic bank lending and the influx of DM59.2bn ($34.2bn) into the German banking system in December.

The capital influx exceeded that of September 1992, when DM42.7bn flowed into Germany amid currency market turmoil. The Bundesbank said this movement was attributable to tax changes which made it attractive for individuals to repatriate investments in Luxembourg to Germany, coupled with the impact of the repatriation of corpo-rate deposits from the Euromarket. Domestic lending rose 10.3 per cent, due mainly to a surge in mortgage borrowing. The Bundeebank said this was due to the fact that tax relief on mortgages became less favourable at the year-end and there had been a rush to Walk-out threat by coalition partner may delay $134bn economic stimulus package

Hosokawa forced to rethink on growth plan

Japan's prime minister, Mr Morihiro Hosokawa, was yester-day forced to rethink sweeping ans for tax reform and delay a Y15,100bn ($134bn) economic stimulus package. Mr Hosokawa was last night struggling to hold together his even-party coalition together after its largest member, the Social Democratic party, threatened to walk out in protest at his plans to raise sales tax. Early yesterday a triumphant Mr Hosokawa unveiled proposals an income tax cut worth Y18.000bn over the next three years, to be funded by a 7 per cent "people's welfare tax" to replace the present 3 per cent sales tax in 1997.

The socialist SDP, elected on a promise not to raise sales tax. protested that it had not been properly consulted. Disquiet unexpectedly spread to other coalition members, including one of Mr Hosokawa's closest allies, Mr Masayoshi Takemura, chief cabinet secretary, who also threatened to resign if the SDP were not offered a satisfactory

Mr Hosokawa was last night meeting his coalition partners to try to find a compromise. The SDP asked for the 7 per cent rate to be suspended - although it does not take effect for three years - while a consultative body debated a new rate. It also wants a promise to spend all the extra revenue on welfare, initially rejected by Mr Hosokawa.

Political analysts believed a compromise would be found, but warned that the political turnoil might hamper Mr Hosokawa's hopes of persuading the US of his government's determination to stimulate economic demand.

Details of the Y15,100bn package were released after a meeting between Mr Hosokawa and Mr Yohei Kono, president of the opposition Liberal Democratic party, which has started to co-operate with the coalition since last week's compromise on

The package, slightly larger than expected, includes Y8,000bn of annual tax cuts, most of which affect income and residence tax. There is another Y9,100bn of government spending and loans, which includes Y2,900bn of public works and Y2,800bn of land

Audi chief to be forced to quit

in Frankfurt

The chairman of Volkswagen's up-market Audi subsidiary, Mr Franz-Josef Kortum, is expected to be forced to resign today after only 13 mouths in the job. The 43-year-old marketing spe cialist has clashed on several occasions with his predecessor, Mr Ferdinand Piech, the controversial VW group chairman. His place is expected to be filled by Mr Herbert Demel, development chief, who will act as "spokesman" for the Audi board, but not as chairman. This is likely to lead to more direct control by Mr Piech. Mr Kortüm's removal may also lead to further turmoil in the VW group, already racked by unexpected losses last year of DM2.3bn ($1.3bn), and striving to reach break-even in 1994. Meanwhile suspicions of theft and industrial espionage in the wake of the appointment of General Motors' former global purchasing chief, Mr José Ignacio López de Arriortúa, who joined last March, remain.

Mr Kortum's first set-to with Mr Piech occurred before his appointment, when he rejected the "spokesman" role and insisted on taking full control. The conflict now leading to his downfall has focused on the autocratic group chairman's demands that Audi, which made a pre-tax 1993, must be turned round this

Mr Kortum has frequently appeared unwilling to bend to his chief, who has swept away swathes of the old VW management within his first year. The most recent departure was that of Mr Juan Antonio Diaz Alvarez, chairman of the Spanish subsidiary, Seat, who was sacked last September. Mr Piech last month accused Mr Diaz of deception over Seat's loss of more than DM200m in DM1.4bn losses in 1993, and warned of possible "penal conse-

Top Italian intelligence official to face charges of Mafia links

By Robert Graham in Rome

The Palermo public prosecutor has asked for Mr Bruno Contrada, the former number three in Italy's domestic intelligence service, to be sent for trial on charges of having links with the

Mr Contrada, in charge of all intelligence matters relating to the Mafia, was arrested on December 24 1992. Since then the Palermo authorities have turned down all requests for him to be released on bail. Mr Contrada is the most senior public official to be arrested on charges of working with Cosa Nostra, the umbrella organisation of the Sicilian Mafia. His arrest was a direct result of information provided by four of the top former members of Cosa Nostra who agreed to co-operate with the authorities - so-called pentitu Palermo magistrates regard a successful prosecution of the Contrada case as central to the credibility of the pentiti. The lat-ter have become a key instrument in the Italian state's fight against organised crime and almost 500 are now giving evidence under witness protection programmes. Their evidence has played an important part in the move by Palermo magistrates to incriminate former premier Mr Giulio Andreotti over alleged links with the Mafia.

Mr Contrada is alleged to have passed on sensitive information to Cosa Nostra. In particular, he is said to have aided Mr Toto Riina, the boss of Cosa Nostra, captured in January 1993, to avoid arrest. Throughout his detention Mr Contrada has protested his innocence. The request to send him for trial came a day after Palermo magistrates issued 76 arrest war rants in an operation aimed at breaking up the links between Cosa Nostra and their civilian support networks. The arrests, based on information supplied by pentiti, included doctors, lawyers and bank employees.

In neighbouring Calabria, the first of a 1,350 military contin-gent arrived yesterday to boost the security forces in their fight against the local mafia, the 'ndrangheta. On Monday two oficers in the Carabinieri para-military police were seriously injured in Reggio Calabria in what the authorities claim was an assas sination attempt by 'ndrangheta gunmen

The weapon used was identified as the same employed against two Carabinieri who were killed two weeks ago near Reggio

These attacks are seen as a violent reply by the 'ndrangheta to increasing police successes against organised crime in the region. But the timing appears linked to the approaching campaign for general elections.

Rexrodt hammered by the steelmakers

By Ariane Genillard in Bonn

The German steel federation yesterday set tough conditions for its backing of a European steel restructuring plan in a meeting with Mr Gunter Rexrodt, the economics

The conditions included guarantees that steelmakers receiving subsidies to cut capacity would not be able to increase their shares in the European steel market and that the agreement would be properly monitored.
"We remain ready to contribute to the European steel restructuring plan. But politicians must ensure these decisive conditions," the federation said in a statement after the

it appeared eager to tone down pessimistic statements voiced across the industry, saying that the European steel restructuring plan was doomed because private steelmakers were not willing to offer significant capacity cuts. The European Union plan aims to cut 30m tonnes of crude steel in the European market

However, sources in the German steel industry yesterday said that these conditions were unlikely to be met and that the federation was indulging in "wishful thinking". Officials at Thyssen Stahl, Germany's largest steel producer, yesterday reiterated

Parliament maps out a

Plans for rebuilding Berlin as the capital of a united Germany have been sharply curtailed by the parliament's budget committee, Reuter reports from Bonn. The budget committee of parliament agreed on Wednesday evening that all ministries should be housed in existing buildings, either former East German ministries or military headquarters left behind by departing Allied forces.

Only the new chancellery and government press office due to be constructed near the old Reichstag parliament building were not mentioned in the resolution, implying they would be built, committee

Several ministries balked at the idea of taking over the squat building that once housed the Third Reich's central bank and became the Communist party headquarters after the war.

But the committee, whose recommendations must still be debated in parliament, said Berlin had so many large buildings - some dating back to its time as the capital of Prussia - that the present government could certainly find enough space. The British, French and US forces that once defended West Berlin will leave the city by the end of this year, freeing a large number of barracks, office buildings and commandants' villas for government

Students and IG Metall protest

By Quentin Peel in Bonn

Token strikes by tens of thousands of German engineering workers spread across northern Germany yesterday, in a fourth day of protests in support of their pay claim

At the same time, thousands of students continued protest actions against the government's decision to impose a freeze on their grants until 1996, instead of increasing them annually by the inflation rate, and to introduce limits on the length of time they can receive public finance for their studies. The action by the engineer ing workers, members of the IG Metall trade union, was centred on the industrial heartland of North Rhine-Westphalia and north Germany. Among the enterprises which suffered work stoppages were the Ford and Opel car plants in Cologne and Bochum. Both union leaders and the employers expect negotiations on the union's 5.5 per cent pay claim to begin again next week. although the employers remain adamant that real cost cuts must be achieved in the current pay round.

The students yesterday won support from the opposition Social Democratic party (SPD) in Bonn, which promised to introduce a proposal in the Bundesrat, the upper house of parliament, for grants to be increased after all.

Malta urges early talks on EU entry

Malta yesterday called for an "immediate" start of accession negotiations to join the European Union, arguing that it would shortly overcome the final economic obstacles to entry. Lionel

Dr Eddie Fenech Adami, the Maltese prime minister, said in Brussels that his government would "in a matter of weeks" meet the European Commission's requirements for regulatory reforms in financial services, competition and consumer protection.

The Maltese declaration puts the European Commission and the 12 EU member states on the spot. Though sympathetic towards Multa's application, sentiment has leaned toward a delay until the end of enlargement negotiations with Finland, Austria, Sweden and Norway. But Dr Fenech Adami said Malta intended to ensure the Commission stuck to the conditions set down on its generally favourable opinion on EU membership

Polish parties meet on crisis

Poland's two-party coalition was due to meet last night to try to resolve its most serious crisis since taking power last autumn, writes Christopher Bobinski from Warsaw. Mr Waldemar Paw-lak, the prime minister, last week dismissed Mr Stefan Kawalec, a deputy minister, against the wishes of Mr Marek Borowski, the finance minister and deputy premier responsible for the economy, prompting a dispute over control of the Finance Ministry.

The finance and privatisation ministries were allocated to the Left Democratic Alliance (SLD) while Mr Pawlak, the Pea party (PSL) leader, got the post of premier. Mr Borowski has now indicated he may resign.

Lionel Barber adds from Brussels: Mr Pawlak yesterday called for a "partnership for development" between the EU and the former communist countries of castern Europe. During talks in Brussels, Mr Pawlak proposed strengthening economic and political links to prepare Poland for full EU membership.

Aérospatiale funding inquiry

The European Commission yesterday said it would carry out a inquiry into whether the French government's capital injection of FFr2bn ($330m) into Aérospatiale would distort competition and therefore constitute illegal state aid, David Buchan writes Aérospatiale said it needed the addition to its current capital which is FFr6bn, or less than half its FFr15bn debt. But it was confident that the capital increase would win Brussels' approval, given that the company had last year considerably retrenched on its FFr2.38bn loss of 1993 and hoped to move into profit by 1995. The Commission takes such prospects for eventual profitability into account when vetting state aid, a Brussels spokesman said.

Finland split on choice of president

By Hugh Carnegy

The two candidates in Sunday's run-off election for the Finnish presidency - Mrs Elizabeth Rehn and Mr Martti Ahtisaari - are running neckand-neck, according to an oninion poll published yesterday.

A Gallup poll in the newspaper Helsingin Sanomat gave Mr Ahtisaari, a senior United Nations diplomat running for the opposition Social Democratic party, a slight edge for the first time since he won the first round of voting last month

The poil gave him 51 per cent against 49 per cent for Mrs Rehn, the right-of-centre defence minister.

But the poll result was well within the 3 per cent margin for error and was weighted against the small Swedishspeaking minority to which Mrs Rehn belongs and which overwhelmingly supports her. A television poll on Wednesday also showed Mrs Rehn just ahead by 50.5 per cent to 49.5 per cent. Nevertheless, the polls appeared to confirm a trend of resurgent support for Mr Ahtisaari, who quickly fell first round of voting. Both candidates are strong supporters of Finland's application to join the European Union and have pledged to safeguard neutral Finland's security - related issues given added potency recently by the rise of nationalist forces in neighbouring Russia. The populist Northern League today begins a three-day congress in Bologna to agree the March 27 general elections.

The central issue confronting Mr Umberto Bossl, the League leader, is whether to accept an electoral alliance with Mr Silvio Berlusconi, the media magnate who entered the political arena last mouth with his Forza Italia (Come On

Mr Berlusconi has made no secret of his desire to forge a "Liberal Democrat" electoral alliance with the League. The northern Italy, alongside the huge media resources of Mr Berlusconi, is a potentially attractive combination.

The League had nearly 9 per cent of the vote nationwide in the 1992 elections with a total of 79 members of parliament in both houses. With the firstpast-the-post system the League could obtain some 150 seats in the chamber of deputies alone. Mr Berlusconi is claiming his own polling organisations are giving him 30 per cent of the vote.

The League has chosen Bologna for its congress as a provocation to the former-communist Party of the Democratic bring on board the National Left, which has always regarded the city as its strong-hold.

President Boris Yeltsin yesterday announced that Georgia would explore the possibility of joining a controversial new rouble union under negotiation between Russia

FT writers report on the western plunge into the emergent markets of Budapest, Prague and Warsaw tidal wave of foreign money is moving into the stock exchanges of the former communist countries of eastern and central Europe. Yesterday's news of the launch of a $200m (£133.3m) investment fund underlines strong western interest in shares quoted in Warsaw, Prague and Budapest.

Heavy buying has accompan-ied signs of an end to the long post-1989 period of economic downturn in Poland, the Czech Republic and Hungary. Western institutional purchases have had a particularly sharp effect during the last few weeks on the Budapest stock exchange, which rose 58 per cent in January. However, several analysis warn that - after heady stock market rises last year particularly in Warsaw, which rose 11fold in zloty terms - the stock exchanges may be heading for a fall. One expert pointing to

Volatile Japanese politics plunged into turmoil again

William Dawkins on Hosokawa's unexpected move

plunged into turmoil yes-terday as the controversial tax plans of Mr Morihiro Hosooutrage on all sides.

Mr Hosokawa's early morning announcement of an income tax cut, to be funded by a rise in sales tax from the current 3 per cent to 7 per cent in three years' time, astonished many in his seven-group coalition and the opposition Liberal Democratic party. Japanese politics has moved into a newly unpredictable phase, and nobody had expected any kind of a decision, let alone such a blunt one, at that ing a political crisis by compromising with the LDP on political reform. Mr Hosokawa has provoked fresh trouble by apparently underestimating the political impact of his tax plan. This has forced him to delay announcement of his economic pump-priming package and attracted, for the first time. Japanese press criticism of his leadership style.

The Asahi Shimbun newspa-

"The prime minister must have been drunk on his high poll rat-ings," said an angry Mr Kozo Igarashi, the construction minister, who belongs to the Social Democratic party.

Yet most analysts think the basic plan, worked out by the three centre-right parties which set the tone for coalition policy, will survive. "It's a purely emotional outburst. This is just Kabuki [theatre]. There will be an agreement because nobody wants an elec chief economist at S.G. War-would deprive the coalition of its 10-seat majority there. "The socialists don't want to leave unless they have to ... they don't want to take the government away from Mr Hosokawa just yet," argued Mr Jeff Young, political analyst at Salomon Brothers Asia.

Mr Hosokawa was probably expecting the SDP to resist the plan, given the party's election pledge last year to oppose any rise in sales tax. But the criticism from other coalition mem-bers and from parts of the LDP - which, ironically, introduced consumption tax - was a ven Mr Masayoshi Takemura, chief cabinet sec-retary, and an open advocate of an increase in indirect taxation, threatened to resign if Mr Hosokawa did not mollify the socialists. "It is better to correct major errors. We may have rushed the decision on the tax," he said.

The plan had been announced too suddenly and was "not even worth discussing", said Mr Ryutaro Hashi-day earlier the LDP looked as if it was firmly behind Mr Hosokawa on tax, on the strength of an agreement between him and Mr Yohei Kono, the LDP president.

Mr Hashimoto's remark appears odd from a former minister at the Finance Ministry, which orchestrated the consumption tax rise. Another Mr Michio Watanabe, welcomed the scheme as "the sole direction" the government can is just as split over tax as is the coalition.

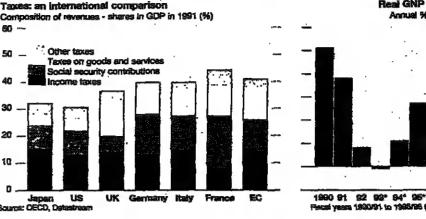

The campaign by the powerful Finance Ministry for a rise in sales tax clearly won over Mr Hosokawa. The ministry argues that it needs to increase revenues from indirect taxation to make up for the decline in income tax revenues that will take place as the number of Japanese aged over 65 increases from 12 per cent now to nearly 25 per cent by 2025.

Industrial unrest could be serious, Jakarta told

Indonesia, under the spotlight as the US ponders whether to remove trading privileges, is facing its worst industrial unrest in recent years, diplomats and labour experts said yesterday, Reuter reports from Jakarta.

Few prospects in sight for an IMF agreement with Nigeria

The International Monetary Fund ended its annual visit last night with no prospect of agreement between Nigeria and its official creditors until the new military government brings spending, inflation and the foreign exchange rate under control. But economists predict that some policies in last month's budget will undermine economic stability. Since late 1990 western-backed deregulation of Nigeria's economy has lapsed whilst fiscal policy has been out of control, leading to a budget deficit estimated at N100bn (£3bn) last year, about 15 per cent of GDP. "The only thing which they deregulated in the past two years was government spending," said an economist

Nigeria is set to accumulate arrears of $8.5bn (£5.7bn) by the year end on external debts of around $28hn and more than half is rescheduled debt to the Paris Club of official creditors, which it has not serviced since August 1992. Debt relief depends on either a standby agreement lasting nine to 18 months or a three-year enhanced structural adjustment agreement (ESAS) with the IMF.

Business snubs Clinton health bill US insurers face bill

By Jurek Martin in Washington

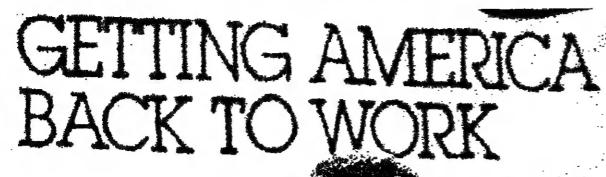

The first week of the Clinton administration's renewed drive for healthcare reform has brought a mixture of tactical defeats, victories and draws in its battle for universal cover-

The most significant setback was the decision on Wednesday by the Business Roundtable, an association of 200 prominent corporate heads, to endorse the more modest reform bill sponsored by Con-gressman Jim Cooper, the Democrat from Tennessee.

The White House conceded it was "disappointed but not surprised" that it had failed in its strenuous efforts to get the association to preserve its pre-vious neutrality. It suggested the Roundtable had been unduly influenced by the arguments of the insurance industry against universal coverage.

The Cooper plan is the only alternative which has attracted measurable bipartisan backing in Congress. It does not require universal coverage, though the congressman argues that his blueprint creating insurance purchasing alliances for small businesses, many of whom now provide no coverage, would have virtually the same effect. He also sees many other similarities with the administration approach, including rellance on what is known as "managed competition."

Its attraction to big business is that it would not force companies to purchase insurance for their employees, nor would it allow the government to put ceilings on insurance premiums, both features of the

proposing to set up a $3bn (£2bn) fund paid for by the insurance industry as part of its overhaul of the controversial Superfund laws governing the clean-up of toxic waste

Ms Carol Browner, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said yester-day that the new fund, to be built up by a levy on the industry starting at a total $500m a year, would help settle insurance claims arising from waste dumped before 1986, when the Superfund law was revised. and cut down on lawsuits.

The administration's draft legislation would also set up a new form of arbitration process for allocating responsibil-ity for cleaning up waste sites, under the auspices of an independent expert, and make other changes that it hopes would resolve some of the law's current problems in assigning liability.

Superfund legislation was first passed in 1960 amid public outcry over notorious dumps such as Love Canal, near the Niagara Falls, or Kentucky's Valley of the Drums.

Japan stalling talks, says US

By Nancy Dunne

A senior US trade official yesterday accused Japan of try-ing to renegotiate the hardfought terms of the US-Japan trade negotiating framework reached at last year's Tokyo

At a congressional hearing, Mr Jeffrey Garten, the commerce undersecretary, said Japanese negotiators were resisting "point by point" the setting of "multiple quantita-tive and qualitative criteria" which would measure progress in opening its vehicle market. The US is seeking a "significant" increase in the number of direct franchise agreements between Japanese dealers and foreign vehicle manufacturers.

It also wants continued increases in the North American content in cars produced by Japanese manufacturers in Japan has sought to position itself on the high ground in its trade stand-off with the US. American demands for "benchmarks" to measure import penetration sectors are being stoutly resisted on the grounds that Tokyo reformers want less, not more, government intervention in the market-

Memories of past highlytouted but ultimately ineffectual bliateral trade pacts with Japan haunt the proceedings. The US has now endured 28 years of merchandise trade deficits with Japan, with last year's climbing back to $59bn. There is little doubt that a failure of the framework talks would bring swift congressional action; at the very least it would mean renewal of Super 301, a now expired tough US trade law. Congressman Richard Gephardt is considering legislation which would direct the Commerce Department to establish unilateral import targets for Japan, making failure to reach those targets punishable by sanctions. In the past, Greece turned down a Turkish offer to supply electricity to the eastern Aegean islands, claiming it would be politically unaccept-able for its tourist industry to be dependent on Turkey. Two years ago, negotiations with the Turkish electricity authority on linking the grids in Thrace were called off after details of the plan appeared in Greek newspapers. However, Greece now faces difficulties in boosting capacity at peak periods as its northern neighbours can no longer supply electricity on demand. A severe drought in Albania where power is produced by hydroelectric plants, has cut electricity exports. Bulgaria suffers from an energy short-age because of reduced trans-fers from Ukraine, while UN sanctions against the former Yugoslavia have curtailed production there. In the medium term, Greece is likely to need regular access to additional capacity.

Demand for electricity is rising by 3.5 per cent a year while further delays in building power plants are expected.

ISO, a federation of 100 national standards bodies, has published more than 9,000 standards since it was set up in 1947, covering everything from screw dimensions and container sizes to car bumper heights and ski-boot bindings. Mexico. US companies have historically taken relatively little interest in international standards because they could prosper in the huge home market. As the importance of trade to the US economy has grown, so too have problems caused by a lack of international standardisation. Many US companies, for instance, still operate on the imperial system of weights and measures, 20 years after most of the rest of the world went over to metric.

Harmonisation of technical standards between the US and Canada under their 1988 bilateral free trade agreement has proved an arduous task, aggravated by the contrasting standards-setting systems. The US has several hundred industry and local government organisations contributing to national standards while Canada has standards, while Canada has just a few standards-writing

The Nafta accord attempts to avoid adding unduly to these problems by requiring national standards to be based on international ones. Any more stringent measures will have to be

Costa Rica has asked the European Commission to make three important changes to its proposed banana import regime in an effort to break the deadlock in a long-running row between Latin American producers and the European Union. A compromise plan offering Latin producers greater access to the European banana market was rejected last month after Costa Rica called on the EU to abolish tariffs

A condition for accepting the Commission's offer of an import ceiling of 2.1m tonnes of fruit would be for the Latin Americans to drop their complaint about the EU's banana regime to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Costa Rica has asked the Commission to make the new import celling take whereby importers pay Ecus100 per tonne for deliveries within the ceiling and to remove the licensing system. The tariff and licensing systems are ways of guaranteeing a market in the EU for higher-cost bananas from African, Caribbean and Pacific countries under Lome Convention obligations. The UK and France would almost certainly raise objections to the abolition of the licensing system.

Mr Nigel Griffiths, Labour's consumer spokesman, said the report showed the need for the government to put pressure on companies to give back money to consumers.

Both Offer and the power distributors frequently say prices have fallen in real terms since privatisation, particularly in the period since last April, not covered by yesterday's report. They also point to improved service standards. However, yesterday's report, a response to an Offer consultation document, demonstrates the cynicism with which the industry's claims are greeted. The Consumers' Association said companies could make a more than adequate profit without increased prices. "Offer has got to get its act together urgently," said Dr John Belshon, chief executive. "It has been sitting on its hands for too long."

The National Consumer Council said the regional companies' rate of return for the distribution businesses reached 9.2 per cent in 1992-93, compared with 6 per cent at British Gas between 5 per cent and 6 per cent.

He flatly rejected the arguments of those on the right of the party that the Conserva-tives needed a period in opposi-tion to rebuild their philosophy and energy. Mr Stevenson said: "A recent visitor survey said the Museum of the Moving Image was the most popular attraction in London so we obviously have a good product."

The report emphasised that the NAO was impressed with the BFT's cultural services and the enthusiasm and commit ment of its staff.

Old allies reassess their not-so-special relationship

t is not, as some have claimed, the worst breach in UK-US relations since Suez. Far from it. But nor is it the the minor squall claimed by 10 Downing Street.

The decision by President Bill Clinton to offer Mr Gerry Adams of Sinn Fein a public relations coup in New York was remarkable not so much in terms of any new damage inflicted on Anglo-US relations. Seen through the focus of Whitehall, its real significance lay in what it revealed about the state that relationship had already reached. It is not an

Mr Major, received warmly in Washington a year ago, has since been denied the ready access to the president that he could take for granted from Mr-George Bush. Time to walk the talk irst there was management jargon. Now there is management jargon to describe the management jargon. "Corporate graffiti", the latest addition to the language, is a derogatory term for a company's unthinking use of the lingo. It is (literally) the catch-phrase to end all catch-

It is high time there was a backlash against this opaque, ugly and cliche-ridden language. Action-cen-tred leadership. Benchmarking. Competences. Downsize. Empowerment. Globalisation. You can go through the alphabet many times without exhausting the vocabulary of management-speak. Open any management book and you may find yourself suffering from what is known in the jargon as the "mego" syndrome - my eyes glaze over.

"Corporate graffiti" has been coined by Tom Robertson, newly appointed professor of marketing at London Business School. The notion came to him one day when he was thumbing through annual reports of US computer companies. He noticed that each claimed to be market driven", and talked about hased competences".

He regards these notions as the "holy grail of management" (instinctively coining another phase) and argues that "the holy grail is dysfunctional as it distracts from getting on with the business". Robertson is not alone. At the Industrial Society, Andrew Forrest,

Three ideas, concepts or models - call them what you will depending on your need for embellishment - are currently floating about in the management world. One is empowerment, an ugly transatiantic neologism which suggests that ordinary workers want, enjoy and benefit from being empowered. Of course, with power comes responsibility, and it is not clear that workers who warm to the former are equally happy about the latter. Also, the empowerment of one group usually means the disempowerment of another group, frequently the former's bosses.

The next idea is delayering, which is a simple, but enormously consequential, structural issue. For all sorts of reasons, including obvious ones such as a set snan of control, many organisations levels or layers.

director of "human resources", is staging a rearguard action, leaching companies that if they want to say anything they should use words that everyone can grasp. "It's like fighting through fog to understand what they are talking about," he

Some management talk is simply naff. "Global" means no more than international. "Marketplace" is a cute way of saying market.

Then there are the euphemisms. Enlightened organisations do not have workers any more. They have "people". Caring companies do not fire people, instead they "downsize" the organisation. Some go one step further and engage in "rightsizing", fearing that the word "down" might have negative connotations. Companies of the 1990s have partners", not suppliers. They do, of course, still have customers whom they claim to worship. Unisys, the US computer company, has developed a "customerise philosophy" to get the message across. Next are phrases to describe a company's professed beliefs. We petition, the list goes on. have corporate missions, corporate

The nouns are bad enough but the verbs are worse. We are meant to "live" the mission, "inbed" the vision. The work force has to "buy into" all new initiatives (ie to accept them) and thereafter "take

But the area in which jargon has made the most serious inroads is in business strategy. Total quality management, business process re-engineering, benchmarking, learning organisations, time-based com-

Models such as the Catholic church are held up, which despite its size has only three or four levels under its CEO, the Bishop of Rome. So the preferred solution, and one which can be done with a stroke of the pen on the organisational chart, is to take out one, two or more levels of management

The next idea, borrowed from the tough, mascnline, no-nonsense world of heavy industry is re-engineering. Though, as in all of these concepts, there is some disagreement as to the precise meaning of the term, it implies and functionally redesigned. Just as the old, complicated, steam engine was re-engineered into the sleek bullet train, so elaborate, traditional organisations can be

What these three new ideas have in common is that they usually lead to a similar result. Bluntly, these new-fangled ideas usually mean the sacking of middle

Is this culling a good idea? Are most middle managers Peter-principled, disengaged and therefore really pretty redundant? If so, why did that situation arise in the first I of someone between the front-line supervisor and the directors?

In some organisations, middle managers will not be missed because senior or top managers were performing their jobs. The owners directed, the directors managed, the managers supervised, the supervisors worked. The job of directors and top managers is predominantly planning, forward looking and "visionary". The job of the supervisor is primarily operational, day-to-day

About 70 per cent of the time and doing work that cannot be for a more complicated notion. The danger is that different people mean different things by the words, or they just use the words because it makes them feel in the swing of things. "Business process re-engi-neering doesn't come tripping off the tongue. People have five different ideas of what the phase means, and so it simply causes confusion," says Forrest.

It is not hard to see why the words have proliferated. One reason is that all management writers and consultants want to be famous; they come up with an idea and then give it a brand name. Once created the words catch on. According to Forrest, people use the words to make themselves appear more knowledge able then they are. "It is easy to slip into jargon to make people think you have something snappy to say," he says.

Some industries are more prone to jargon than others. The electronics companies are perhaps the worst. While others talk of the office as the "workplace", computer companies have gone one step fur-ther and call it the "enterprise envi-

So what can be done? Manage ment speak is so entrenched it is hard to see how it could change Yet Robertson thinks things will change if companies direct their attention to the subject rather than the words. people at the coalface.
The middle manager – the departmental head, the divisional chief and the co-ordinator supposedly did some planning, some man-management and even practised some of the skill for which they had been trained. Some were simply bureaucrais, some against any change which threatened their stability, and some simply incompetent.

Perhaps most organisations simply had too many middle managers and a bit of judicious pruning was rather a good idea. But to remove a whole level, or layer, or generation, may be mally foolhardy, at least until its function is fully

Throw out the old yardsticks

Building societies need a better rating system, says Peter Welch

onventional wisdom has it that growing competition in the financial services market will force building societies to adopt leaner and flatter management structures. Those that do not will, as a result, have to merge with more successful competitors. However fashionable it may be, this line of argument misses the distinctive management challenges facing building societies. Individual societies may have fat to cut but the sector as a whole is already lean and getting leaner. Many of the new challenges arise from the growing complexity of their activities over the past decade:

Their core mortgage and deposit business has been overlaid with much greater product differentiation.

 They have become significant intermediaries in the sale of life and general insurance, and a number have set up their own insurance operations.

 Many large societies have diversified into new activities such as credit cards, current accounts, unit trusts, estate agency and property development. A small number have set up operations in continental Europe. The real challenge facing societies' management is the move from a simple two-product business to a complex multi-product group of busine Applying a mutual ownership structure to this new environment adds to the complexity.

At the heart of this exercise is the need for new ways to assess organisational performance. Many traditional measures now give misleading signals. Rising staffing levels or cost ratios may say more about a society's changing business than about its operational efficiency. This becomes clear if group performance, which includes subsidiary companies, is compared with that of the society alone. Many of the new activities are undertaken through subsidiaries of the society. On this page last year two Northern Irish academics, Charite Ferguson and Donal McKillop. attached great importance to the 1992 the number of head office and administrative staff of most large societies increased by more than the number of branch staff ("A bureaucratic legacy". November 5 1993). They cited this as evidence of lingering bureaucracy. But their finding begs the question about what has driven the increase. Take the Alliance & Leicester, which shows the largest jump in head-office and administrative staff over the period. According to Ferguson and McKillop, its headcount grew threefold from 1,815 employe in 1989 to 5,990 in 1992. But most of this increase reflects the acquisition of Girobank in July 1990 with its more labour-intensive portfolio of activities. Excluding Girobank and other subsidiaries, Alliance & Leicester's head-office and administrative staff only increase by 200 between 1969 and 1992. The Alliance & Leicester's experience is indicative of the sector as a whole. The value of assets per building society employee grew from £2.8m in 1989 to £3.7m in 1992, an increase of a third. Taking the most comprehensive yardstick, societies' management expenses - which cover staff and other operating costs - fell from a low 1.22 per cent of their assets in 1989 to 1.07 per cent in 1992. If the measures are recalculated to include the assets and staff of subsidiaries, societies' organisational performance looks very different. The value of assets per employee falls from £3.7m to 12.9m. Management expens rise from 1.07 to 1.4 per cent of

This does not tell us that societies' subsidiaries are more bureaucratic than their core business nor that diversification has been unsuccessful; only that traditional measures of organisational performance have become less reliable. Total assets may be the wrong yardstick to measure the staffing levels and cost structures of a building society whose activities extend beyond mortgage lending.

Dead Funny

has been a good for British comedy. John Godber's April Paris the Ambassadors comes the premiere of Terry Johnson's Dead Funny at the Hampstead Theatre.

Johnson is becoming a prolific playwright. Hysteria, his piece that Sigmund Freud and Salvador Dali, was shown at the Royal Court only last autumn. Dead Funny is more down to earth. Although Freud is still mentioned and medical science is away, this play about relatively normal people in Islington, 1992. Richard, a handsome consultant obstetrician, returns him for dinner, having performed five hysterectomies in a course of the day in the pub on the way back. He is not drunk, just nervous, for it is Wednesday - the night for sex therapy whome.

She can also smile with a tear in her eye. This is a marvellously disciplined performance, even though - perhaps to tip the balance in favour of the Dead Funny Society - she does not always have the best lines.

he other outstanding performance, full held back until after the interval, is Niali Buggy's Brian. In act one he is bumbling, officious, fussy lower class camp. In act two he comes out. "Benny," he announces, "was gay - and so am L" He has bought a ticket to Amsterdam to celebrate, but tears it up and ends consoling Eleanor. What they both want, they say, is "a nice young man, preferably virile, possibly the same one". There are additional delights in the plot. A defect is that, as in Hysteria, Johnson is not always sure what genre he is working in. He moves into farce and out of it for no obvious reason. But Dead Funny is bursting with life. Johnson directs, and the excellent set is designed by Sue Plummer.

Time-out for the Tories

If the coming weekend is like most of the others to which have become accustomed the Sunday papers will call for Mr head. Come to think of it, the axeman's cry is frequently neard on weekdays as well. It is misplaced. A new prime minister would not solve Britain's problems: nor would any reunite the Tories. What is required is a new government. First elected in 1979, this Conservative administration has worn itself out. The party's authority will return one day but it a period from the distractions of office. A few years of relief from care and responsibility - all those loyal worthies to put in charge of all those quangos - would give it time to reconnect its thinking with the concerns of the electorate. When they are ex-ministers some of the brighter members of the cabinet may come to understand that focusing on the outstanding element of the 1980s mix the efficacy w su market allied to the cult of the ual - is not a sufficient founds-

This broadening of thought is impossible while the Tories, who have lost their reputation remain nominally On a previous occasion I observed that the factions we see today might be compared to the Christian Democrats and liberals of continental European politics. Sir, The M&G Group's proposal for renewing its executive share option scheme has attracted a certain amount of interest and ill-informed comment from some quarters because it does not conform in one respect to the joint guidelines of the National Association of Pension Funds and the Association of British Insurers.

From Mr L E Linaker.

Sir, Commenting on Spencer's perwall pensions, Lex writes (February 2): "The mass mar-ket may be better served by a standardised M&S financial product than the inappropriate personal pensions many have thus far been sold." Yet Mr Hosokawa, flush perhaps from last week's success in forcing through his electoral reform bill pan to be badly in lated Maralla opposition to higher consumption taxes, even in deferred form. To ignore the MoF's concerns and simply remove the consumption tax increase from the package would be a mistake. Both Japanese and international experience suggests that unstable politics can easily lead to fiscal profligacy. But the MoF's insistence on a revenueneutral package is unnecessarily severe. Even after four previous fiscal packages, the OECD calculates that Japan had a structural (cyclically adjusted) budget surplus equal to 0.8 per cent of gross domestic product last year, compared with deficits of 3.3 per cent in the US, 3.7 per cent in Germany and 5 per cent in the UK. What the prime minister needs is a compromise which satisfies the MoF and holds together the coelition and allows him to pursue the deregulatory agenda which is the key to trade relations with the US. Money worries

The Bundesbank was never likely to all internal mine yesterday, with December M3 money supply growing at an amualised rate of 8.1 per cent. It matters little that the figure was badly distorted, or that the underlying news on inflation and wages is good, or even that the D-mark has been more stable in exchange markets recently. The bank could not announce a money supply figure so far above target and then cut rates without serious loss of credibility. What 🗓 🔤 clear 📗 whether money supply was the only factor holding it back.

The barral interest rate trend has become difficult to read as market rumours intensify of possible Fed-eral Reserve tightening. Talk yester-day that such action was imminent damped US financial markets. It also unreally others, including the UK, which had run up earlier in anticipation if miller round if European interest rate cuts. The Fed's intentions an of course, by no means certain and the current US inflation picture action. When it does though, the exchange market impact of a Fed tightening will inevitably make the Bundesbank more circumspect. Even if the Bundesbank is simply worried about the money supply, nothing is likely to happen before the next council meeting that would make it change its mind on rates. Its cautious pace may thus continue to disappoint. A life rate cut looks even many remote, especially since the latest reserve figures suggest the authorities prefer to counter sterling strength by

Rolls-Royce

The current contest to produce the world's most powerful aero-engine seems to be driven by machismo. While very high thrust engines are required for new wide-body twin-engined jets, the recent tests of the GE90 and Rolls-Royce's Trent engines produce 25 per cent more power than such aircraft currently require. At present only the Airbus A330 and the Bosing 777 need these engines, yet GE, Pratt & Whitney and Rolls have all invested hundreds of millions in this technology while orders have been scarce. All three have to compete on and price for business there is.

In that context, Rolls' loss of the engine order for Japan Airlines' new Boeing 777s is disappointing but unsurprising. JAL can hardly afford to straight equity is MANA by the spend lavishly and, since two other Japanese airlines have already specified Pratt engines for their 777 fleets, JAL has an incentive to share main-tainance will. Rolls may be well ing the race for orders on the Airbus 330, but is lagging badly with the more significant Boeing 777. That has stretched out the pay-back period for the Trent.

Perhaps even more significantly, the market may not grow rapidly enough to justify the investment in three such engines. With orders unlikely to pick up for at least two years, competition will intensify. Pratt and GE both have deeper pockets than Rolls, and bigger balance sheets to support a protracted fight. They are also less dependent on the aerospace cycle. Rolls' rating of 60 times likely 1993 earnings seems to reflect more than generously the company's own sunny optimism.

Thai Military Bank nets Bt2bn

Thei Military Bank (TMB), one-third owned by Thailand's armed forces, yesterday announced a 58 per cent rise in net profit to Bt2.85bn ($112m) last year from Bt1.80bn in 1992.

TMB's profits rose more sharply than those of other leading banks such as Bangkok Bank, Slam Commercial Bank and Thai Farmers

Bank, but some analysts believe TMB will not be large enough to compete effectively against its rivals as the Thai financial sector is liberalised and opened more to foreign banks.
Siam City Bank reported a 68 per cent rise in its net profit to Bt1.98bn in 1993 from Bt1.17bn the previous year. The two banks have yet to divulge further details of their results.

These price rises have yet to feed

It is not surprising the steel companies feel more optimistic than for some time. But their recovery needs to be put in context.

Steel prices are still well below the level reached in 1988 and 1989 - when steelmakers enjoyed a brief respite between the long slump of the early 1980s and more dip.

Slow economic growth in Europe and Japan, adding to the overcapacity in the worldwide steel industry, is likely to prevent prices rising much

The construction of new mini-mills in the US - some built by the big steel companies - will add to capacity over the next two years, further holding back prices.

In addition, the operating profits of the big steel companies look fragile when set against combined sales running at around $5bn a quarter. At the after tax level, the steelmakers have yet to break back into profit (though that should come this year).

The big steelmakers also continue to be weighed down financially by the sort of problems that newer, low-cost rivals do not face. Bethlehem Steel took ■ $350m charge in the last quarter to cover restructuring in its structural products division, an area where in most competition from the mini-mills.

Falling long-term interest rates have pushed up the steelmakers' pen-sion fund liabilities: Bethlehem pumped $260m into its pension fund in 1993, but still saw the fund's deficit rise to $1.6bn, from $1.2bn the year before. LTV, amerging from bankits pension plans, and intends to contribute $579m more this year.

Concerns like these have tempered optimism among the steelmakers, in spite of their full order books.

US share prices fell sharply vesterday morning in reaction to a sell-off in the US Treasury market, writes Frank McGurty in New York.

By 1 pm, the Dow Jones Industrial Average was 17.73 lower at 3,957.81, while the more broadly based Standard & Poor's 500 was 2.62 down at 479.38. In the secondary markets, the American SE composite was 1.54 easier at 486.35. and the Nasdaq composite off 3.99 at 796.58.

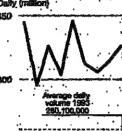

Volume on the NYSE was heavy, with 188m shares traded by 1 pm. Declines led advances by 1,235 to 753.

After a record-breaking session for most market measures and an 11-point advance by the Dow industrials, stocks were ripe for profit-taking. Bonds provided the trigger, as growing speculation that the Federal Reserve Board would soon tighten its accommodative monetary policy sent a shiver through the US Treasury mar-ket. Prices across the yield curve slid, led by the benchmark 30-year security which tumbled & to 99 during the

The day's economic news was mixed, and somewhat inconclusive. The Labor Department reported a 59,000 jump in weekly claims for unemployment benefit, but the unfavourable trend was largely blamed on the cold weather and disruption caused by the Los Angeles earthquake.

Separately, the Commerce Department said that December factory orders were up 1.2 strong, but it fell just below the consensus forecast of 1.4

Elsewhere, Wal-Mart edged $% ahead at $27% on a 5 per cent increase in stores opened for at least one year. JC Penney added $1/4 to $54 and Gap Stores $% at $41%.

Interest rate-sensitive stocks were put into play. Many banking issues suffered setbacks. Bankers Trust retreated $1% to $83. Chemical $% to $38% and First Interstate $1% to $67.

Toronto was dragged lower by profit-taking in brisk midday dealings. The TSE 300 index fell 21.92 to 4,551.51 at noon in volume of 64.9m shares.

The media sector, 134.54 or 1.5 per cent higher at 9,340.94, was enlivened by Rogers Com-munications's unexpected take-over approach to Maclean Hunter. Rogers shed C$% to C$20% but Maclean Hunter put on C$1% to C$17 in volume of Weaker bonds trigger Bourses weaken on lack of German cut *

The Bundesbank's refusal to cut key interest rates, and the high German December M3 growth rate which preceded it, had a progressively weakening effect on bourses, writes Our Markets Staff. FRANKFURT began by threatening the 2,200 level for the second time this week, the Ibis-indicated Dax index peaking at 2,193.57 in the prebourse, but an 8.1 per cent growth in December M3 her-alded the Buba interest rate decision and the slide began.

The Dax closed 32.29 lower at 151.72 on the session, and just off its low for the day at 2,137.08 in the post bourse. Mr John Blackley of James Capel acknowledged that rate cuts were not expected a week ago but said that, this week, a number of German banks had changed their minds and forecast cuts of a quarter-point.

Turnover was flat at DM9.4bn. Among interest ratesensitive stocks, utilities reflected the Buba news with RWE down DM15.50 to DM475.50 by the end of the post-bourse, and Veba off DM15 at DM495. Elsewhere, Preussag dropped DM11.50 to DM451.50 although analysts said that its PARIS reflected disappointment at the lack of a German cut, even although this had largely been discounted by most analysts, while many investors decided that the time was ripe for profit-taking after Wednesday's record high.

AMSTERDAM saw a 5 per cent fall in Wolters Kluwer, the publishing house, on reports that subscribers to the group's specialised publications felt that prices were too high. There were further reports that some subscribers were calling for a boycott of the publisher's highly profitable legal publications.

Wolters Kluwer's shares dropped FI 6.20 to FI 126.20, but off a session low of Fl 122.80. A broker at MeesPierson in Amsterdam remarked that he thought the reports were exaggerated, and considered the sharp decline more the result of institutions using this as an excuse to take profits: the shares had risen some 22 per cent since December before KI.M was the day's other main story, as the airline announced plans to issue 20m new shares, and reported a rise in third quarter net profit. The shares lost 80 cents to F1 48.20, but had been trading at Fi 49.30 during the day.

Nikkei slips amid turmoil as fiscal package delayed

Investors were inactive as the turmoil within the coalition government over the economic fiscal package, including the tax changes, blocked its scheduled announcement, writes

Emiko Teruzono in Tokyo. The Nikkei average lost 75.21 at 20,174.82 as caution prevailed, due to the prolonged negotiations within the coalifirst section stocks slipped 14.93 to 1.612.73.

The 225-issue Nikkei fluctuated between 20,433.04 and 19,935.19. It was higher in the morning, with overseas investors and arbitrageurs encour-aged by Wednesday's rise in the Nikkei futures contract in Chicago; but profit-taking by domestic corporations and financial institutions held sway later, even though some investors, looking to increase their exposure, sought bargains at lower levels.

Social Democratic Party opposition to the increase in sales taxes, designed to finance an income tax cut, prevented the announcement of the economic support package. The SDP threatened to pull out of the coalition if Mr Morihiro Hosokawa, the prime minister pushed forward with the Finance Ministry's plan.

Finally, there is foreign buying. Foreigners accounted for much of 1993's big surge on the Helsinki bourse, after restrictions on foreign share ownership were relaxed at the start of the year. They remain net investors, thanks to the fundamentals and because a strengthening of the Finnish markka is providing favourable currency exposure.

Signs that the market has entered a new phase are apparent from the way that buying preferences have started to change. In recent days, banking and finance companies. construction issues and real estate investment groups have come to the fore, eclipsing the big export groups which led the way during 1993. Forestry, one of the star sectors of 1993. has underperformed the market this year with a gain of a relatively modest 12 per cent. As worries about overheating grow, the market advance will inevitably slow and become less sure. The rise will be dampened further by an increase in equity supply. A number of groups are expected to launch new share issues to rebuild recession-weakened balance sheets. There is also a good chance that the government, finally, will launch its privatisation programme. One uggestion is that it will initially seek to self off chunks in state-controlled companies already listed, such as Knso-Gutzeit, the forestry group; Valmet, in paper machinery; and Outokumou, in mining. The relatively small size of the Heisinki stock exchange total market capitalisation is only around FM160bn - has always made it one of Europe's more volatile markets. With
